BIOGRAPHY

Since 1886 Renzo Buttazzo work with Pietra Leccese (limestone from Lecce), and during this time he combined the traditions and craftsmanship of hand carving with new and experimental techniques to create an unmistakable style. Through his work he hopes to make the unseen visible, turning an abstract idea into a physical object.

The pieces he creates express the contradictions of life, the rational and the mysterious, the finite and the infinite, the positive and the negative. The unique qualities of the Lecce stone combined with his treatment of it transform it from heavy and rigid into works that are light, soft and fluid. In his creations he juxtaposes mass with void, contrast fullness with emptiness, and this - together with the very distinctive marks of the hand-held tools - are the very essence of his work.

His creations are always produced in a limited series and can also be tailored to suit client's specific wants and needs.

He produces a very wide range of products; sculptures, furniture, lamps, sculpted walls, which have appeared in international magazines, TV programs and art collections, and he regularly collaborate with architects, art dealers and interior designers to produce site specific works for their projects. In 2001, the President of the Italian Republic appointed him Chevalier in the National Order of Merit of the Italian Republic for his work and for having reinvented the way of working with Lecce stone, other than in baroque monuments

The Lecce stone

Unique and extremely soft stone witch date back 4 to 20 million years. It is a part of the Puglia (Italy) patrimony and heritage because their homes and churches are made from it.

There are various fossils that are millions of years old inside the stone like megalodon teeth (22 meters sharks that inhabited our waters).
